START WORK ON STREET LIGHTS HERE ON MONDAY

32 Light Standards Will Be Erected on Four Main Streets Of Town.

WILL BE READY MEMORIAL DAY

Work will be started on Gettysburg's new "white way" on Monday, an official of the Metropolitan Edison company announced today "We hope to have it completed before Memorial Day," the official said.

A crew of men will start laying the lines at that time. All equipment has been shipped to the local office and everything is in readiness to rush the work to completion.

Gettysburg's "White Way" is the culmination of a dream of local residents of many years' standing and is expected to be of material benefit not only to those merchants whose places of business front the four main streets where the standards will be erected, but to the entire community.

32 Standards

Nine standards will be erected on York and Chambersburg streets and seven standards on Carlisle and Baltimore streets. The standards will be erected on the staggered system.

The original "white way" plan was developed several years ago. At that time more than $15,000 in cash was pledged by local residents who wanted Gettysburg's streets electrically lighted, in a modern way, for the benefit of the community.

Those in charge of the affair placed the $15,000 in cash and pledges, which included pre-dated checks and notes, before the town council. That body, after considerable discussion, rejected the proposal.

The plan lagged for some time, until the present council saw the advisability of a "white way" and immediately contracted for its erection.

Want Extension

The cost of erection is being borne by the Metropolitan Edison company and the borough will pay $1,891 a year for current.

The original contract called for 28 standards on the four main streets, the standards to be erected in the first block from the square.

Later town council decided to add one more standard in each street, thus making 32 standards.

Many merchants and other town people are in favor of extending the "white way" to two or three blocks from the square, but the council feels that it cannot afford to enter into such a contract at this time.

The new street lighting extension will increase Gettysburg's street standards to 44, twelve having been erected in the square some time ago.

WILL DECIDE ON SOUTH MT. FAIR MONDAY EVENING

Executive Committee To Meet in Arendtsville; Many Favor Move.

MUCH INTEREST IN EXPOSITION

The executive committee of the South Mountain fair association will meet Monday night, in Arendtsville, at which time they will determine whether a fair shall be held September.

From an unofficial source The Times has learned that majority of the executive committeemen are in favor of another fair this year and that the committee will vote favorably on the question.

Last year the fair was "rained out" for three days and officials continued the exposition for two days into the week following the scheduled dates. The response for the two extra days more than repaid the fair officials for the added expense incurred in continuing the fair.

State Appropriation

The regular state appropriation totaled approximately $875 and the same appropriation will be forthcoming from the state this year if the association decides to hold another fair.

The widespread interest in the fair, extending to neighboring counties during recent years and constantly attracting increased crowds, have influenced most of those directing the annual expositions in favor of making the fair an annual event, regardless of economic conditions.

The exhibits have been larger and more attractive in display and quality than is usually seen at fairs in Pennsylvania. One critic, recognized as an authority on judging, has declared that the South mountain fair exhibits "are superior to any I have seen in the east and worthy of commendation."

In recent years fair officials have been confronted with the steadily growing demand for more space. One observer suggested that the grounds be extended into the woods bordering the north end of the park and it is believed that this will have to be done if the fair continues to grow in interest and agricultural expansion.

Entertainment Features

One of the features of the fair in recent years has been the free entertainment program presented each afternoon and evening.

Fair officials have adopted a policy of "clean, wholesome and enjoyable" entertainment programs and they have made a decided hit with each year's attractions.

Adams countians who have been interested in the fair not only from standpoint of exhibits but because of its entertainment value are awaiting the decision of the executive committee Monday night.

After noting gross income, take year before he finds what he owes out the usual exemptions and deductions of which there are a lot more than you think.

To your next income thus determine—up to $20,000—you are allowed to take off ten per cent, if it is earned and not income from investments.

ITINERANT IS RELEASED ON ARSON CHARGE

John Collins, 63, Sent To Jail Until Monday on a Vagrancy Count.

DENIES TRYING TO FIRE BARN

John Collins, 63-year-old itinerant, arrested Thursday evening on suspicion of having attempted to set fire to the barn of Otis Funt, Butler township, was dropped as a suspect by members of the state fire marshal's office who examined him closely at state police headquarters here this morning.

While Collins, a veteran semi-professional baseball player in Trenton, New Jersey, and vicinity, was being quizzed, his reactions to questions were recorded on a "lie detector" brought to Gettysburg from the fire marshal's office in Harrisburg.

Officers said the machine failed to reveal that Collins was telling anything but the truth during the examination.

Collins denied that he attempted to set fire to the Funt barn by lighting corn fodder stuffed under the barn door. He also denied that he was in Adams county from the latter part of December until March, when six large barns were destroyed by fire.

To Jail As Vag

Funt discovered the fire at his barn and extinguished it before any damage was done. Earlier in the evening, Collins stopped at the Funt home and asked the time of day, leaving as soon as he set his watch.

Trooper Edward Bouse, of the state fire marshal's office, conducted the quizzing of Collins at headquarters today.

After the examination, Collins was arraigned before Justice of the Peace John C. Shealer on a charge of vagrancy, and was committed to the Adams county jail until Monday morning, with the provision that he leave the county as soon as he is discharged.

"I'll break the speed limit getting out of here," Collins said.

Collins was arrested at the home of Mrs. Roberta Anderson, Butler township, about three miles from the Funt farm, by Trooper Joseph F. X. Bushey, of the local state police sub-station.

Coroner's Jury Declares J. G. Bierly's Death Due to M. Nary's Reckless Driving

Testimony Reveals That Melvin Nary and Not Victim Was Driving Automobile at Time of Fatal Crash; Jury Urges Indefinite Suspension of Driver's License.

YOUTH SAYS HE WAS "ADVISED" TO SAY BIERLY WAS AT WHEEL

An inquest into the death of J. Glenn Bierly, near Fairfield, who died at the Warner hospital, March 22, of injuries suffered in an automobile accident on the Gettysburg-Fairfield road, March 17, uncovered the fact that Melvin Nary, 17, of Fairfield, and not Bierly was driving the machine at the time of the accident.

As a result of this newly-developed testimony, the jury, empanelled by Dr. Edgar A. Miller, Adams county coroner, returned a verdict setting forth that Bierly's death was due to Nary's reckless driving and recommended indefinite suspension of his driver's license.

Admits Driving Car

Nary, son of Quay Nary, owner of the machine, was the first witness summoned. Nary said that on the evening of March 17, he, together with Bierly, Ellis Wortz, Donald Lowe and Paul Stoner, all of Fairfield, left Fairfield about 9:45 o'clock and drove to Gettysburg.

They spent about half an hour here and left Gettysburg about 10:45 o'clock to return to Fairfield. Nary testified that he drove the car both to Gettysburg and on the return trip to the scene of the accident.

He testified he had no recollection of the machine leaving the highway, remembering only when the car struck the telephone pole. He said he was traveling about 40 miles an hour at the time.

Were Not Drinking

Nary and the other three survivors of the crash testified there was no drinking by any of them that evening.

When asked by Patrolman James G. Warren, of the local sub-station of the state motor patrol, who investigated the crash, why on the following day he (Nary) told the officer that Bierly was driving, the Fairfield youth said, "I don't know." In a private conversation with Patrolman Warren after he testifield, Nary said "some one" had advised him to say Bierly was driving.

Nary testified he could not recall how he got out of the machine, but added that he remembers seeing Bierly's body lying on the ground on the left side of the car. Nary said Bierly was riding on the front seat with him at the time of the crash. The witness said he had been driving a car about two years.

The testimony of the other three surviving occupants of the machine corroborated that of Nary. All said they could give no reason for the car leaving the highway. None of them heard a tire blow out and none know of anything wrong with the steering gear or other running parts. None of them were rendered unconscious, but all were confused about what took place just after the crash.

Patrolman Investigates

Wortz said he could give no reason why he told the officer that Bierly was driving at the time of the accident.

Charles Reck, another witness, said the Nary machine passed his car while he was en route to Fairfield shortly before the accident. Henry Vincent and Lawrence Sites, who were with Reck, supported Reck's testimony.

Patrolman Warren testified that he was called to the scene of the accident about midnight on March 17, but when he arrived no one was there and he continued his investigation the following day.

Leo Zentz was another witness.

Jury's Verdict

The jury's verdict follows:

"That Glenn Bierly came to his death from injuries sustained while riding in a sedan owned by Quay Nary, of Fairfield, and driven by Melvin Nary, on the night of March 17 in a crash near the S. A. Culbertson farm on the Gettysburg-Fairfield road, due to the careless handling or reckless driving of Melvin Nary and recommend to the state highway department the indefinite suspension of his driving privileges."

On the jury were R. S. Reindollar, J. M. McCleaf, Preston I. Weikert, G. M. Neely and Frank M. Moore, all of Fairfield, and Hugh C. McIlhenny, of Gettysburg.

"All those interested in Gettysburg are invited to attend the session whether or not they are members of the Chamber," Secretary Aumen said.

Matters of prime importance to the entire community will be brought before the meeting.

Suggested Features

A number of suggested features have been presented to the local civic organization and these will be discussed and a promotion committee likely named to start working at once.

The proposed airport question will also be discussed with the advisability of advertising and publicity for Gettysburg this year.

The Chamber will also seek to learn the attitude of local merchants relative to bringing more conventions to Gettysburg.

Four are booked for this year and the Chamber is anxious to know whether the merchants and town people want the civic organization to extend invitations for conventions in 1935.

President Dickson has announced that the meeting will be brief as possible.

MAYOR OF "SMALLEST CITY IN UNITED STATES" DIES

Parker City, Pa., April 7 (AP)—The mayor of "the smallest city in the United States" died Friday.

And the passing of Fred C. Freight recalls the boisterous days of more than half a century ago when Parker City was a magic oil center of 20,000 fighting, drilling oil pioneers.

The mayor, 65, grew up with the city and his declining years also saw its decline to a mere 900 recidents. But proud citizens remembered the glory that once was theirs and retained the city charter.

Parker City now is not even listed as a postoffice, but "we still have a distinction," its residents say. "We claim to be the smallest city in the United States."

Blossom Festival Dates Unchanged

Washington, April 7 (AP)—Tired of depending on the vagaries of the beautiful but temperamental Japanese blossoms, officials have set the Washington cherry blossom festival as from April 19 to 21.

Claude W. Owen, president of the Washington board of trade, declined to change dates when told yesterday the blossoms probably would open between April 12 and 14. The display remains on about ten days.

WOMAN, 60, MISSING AFTER OCEAN VOYAGE

New York, April 7 (AP)—Police of the missing persons bureau Friday were asked to search for Mrs. Ethel Parks, 60-year-old widow of Cleveland, Ohio, who disappeared March 29 after arriving on the liner Western World from Buenos Aires.

Mrs. Parks was returning from a visit with a daughter in the Argentine and was to have left immediately for Cleveland by rail. Steamship records show her baggage was checked off the pier.

Donald O. Price, a cousin of the missing woman, said Mrs. Parks was not stopping with relatives here. She is the widow of Richard Parks, Cleveland stockbroker and a granddaughter of James Farmer, who built the Cleveland and Pittsburgh railroad, now a part of the Pennsylvania system.

18 INJURED IN CWA RIOTS

6,00 Minneapolis Unemployed Stage Demonstration on Friday.

Minneapolis, April 7 (AP)—A cursing mob of 6,000 unemployed rioted over blood-spattered sidewalks Friday as authorities battled them beneath hidden muzzles of machine guns mounted in the city hall-courthouse, which the chief of police said was the target of a bomb plot.

No shots were fired, but tear gas lingered in the air for hours after eighteen persons, including thirteen policemen, were taken to hospitals with injuries suffered in two outbreaks within three hours. National guardsmen were not requested by the police, although demanded by several judges.

Thirty persons were jailed and many had bruised faces and cracked skulls.

Building Surrounded

Hours afterward the building was surrounded by a cordon of police, warned by Chief Michael Johannes to be on the alert for an attempt to bomb the structure. He said he had been informed twenty-five armed men with pistols were ready to march there.

As an aftermath to the melee that started at 10 a. m. with a bombardment of paving blocks, chunks of coal, bottles, stones and scrap iron, Alderman A. G. Bastis demanded immediate ouster of Chief Johannes by the city council unless rioters under arrest were freed.

The demand was shelved temporarily, Chief Johannes declaring "there's going to be law and order as long as I am master of ceremonies."

Aged Woman Leads Mob

An aged woman on crutches, screaming invectives, and hundreds of men and women disporting red arm bands moved on the city hall demanding continuation of the CWA at union wages, increased relief allowances, and no investigation of former CWA workers demanding relief.

When speakers climbed atop parked automobiles around the city hall, and refused to obey police orders, the bombardment began. At the time, the council was debating the farmer-labor party's platform for a sweeping program of public ownership, which some councilmen branded "communistic."

Two Strikes Are Settled; 6,600 Men Return to Work

(By the A. P.)

Two strikes affecting 6,600 workers have ended and three federal agencies have taken steps looking to return of more than 30,000 other workers to their jobs.

Workers in three Wisconsin plants of the Nash motor company voted Friday to accept terms suggested by the federal automobile labor board for settlement of a strike involving 4,600 men.

A strike of 2,000 employees of the Dryden rubber company in Chicago ended. The workers have been out since Wednesday.

The automobile labor board held a conference in Detroit with representatives of employees and officials of the motor products corporation where a walkout of several hundred workers in one department resulted in idleness for 5,600 men.

Woman Leads Jobless Riot

Scrnton, April 7.—The main corridor of city hall was the scene of a riot Friday afternoon when fifty men and women members of the Lackawanna County Unemployed council clashed with a squad of uniformed police and detectives who tried to escort them from the building.

Policemen traded punches with several of the male members of the mob. A number of the policemen were struck and kicked. The demonstrators likewise were roughly handled.

Helen Dorio, of Throop, woman leader of the mob, was half-dragged and half carried down to the basement and into the women's cellroom at police headquarters. She screamed at the top of her voice, "My arm is being broken."

MRS. TOUHY TO STAND TRIAL IN MAIL THEFT

Chicago, April 7 (AP).—Mrs. Jessie Touhy, wife of fugitive Tommy Touhy, waived examination and was held by the government for removal to Asheville, North Carolina, for trial as a participant in the Charlotte mail robbery.

Mrs. Touhy denied participation in the $105,000 robbery or handling any of the loot, and said she wanted a chance to prove her innocence. She will be taken to Asheville in a few days for trial.

Mrs. Touhy was arrested several weeks ago at Baltimore with Basil Banghart, who was sentenced to 99 years for the John Factor kidnapping; Isaac Costner, convicted last week of robbery, and Mrs. Mae Blalock. She returned to Chicago and was released, authorities explaining they did not know she was wanted in North Carolina. She surrendered Thursday night when told she was wanted.

AND NOW THE STREAMLINE BOB!

Attractive, isn't it? It's the "streamline wave," a new style of hair bob for 1934, and it won Jean du Plessis of Chicago the gold trophy, with which she is shown, in the Century of Progress bob contest. The contest was part of the annual convention of the Hairdressers' association. (Associated Press Photo)

VIOLATORS OF PACT WARNED

U. S. Willing to Act Against Violator of International Arms Pact.

[Associated Press, Copyright, 1934]

London, April 7.—The United States is willing to join in economic and financial action against any violator of an international arms pact, provided that Washington could be the sole judge of whether such steps were justified, the Associated Press learned form an authoritative American source Friday night.

Such modified cooperation in punitive measures to guarantee the enforcement of provisions of a disarmament agreement means that the United States would not commit itself in advance to any definite step along this line. Instead, it would await violations before making a decision.

These facts were revealed following upon a conference of Norman H. Davis, American Ambassador-at-Large, with Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, Friday.

Davis States U. S. Views

Davis gave Sir John the views of the Roosevelt administration on arms reductions and guarantees for the carrying out of arms treaties, and afterward sent a report to Washington on his conversations.

The United States was represented as insisting that it retain its independence at all times and declined to permit any other nation to decide when punitive steps are necessary. The United States will judge what the facts of any given case are should violations occur.

France on Friday sent England a memorandum of the French views of German rearmament and enfocement of treaties. In the exchange of French and British views it has just about been decided that military reprisals would be too strong, both nations leaning to economic and financial action.

STOCK REPORT

New York, April 7 (AP).—Steadiness characterized the early stock trading today. Alcohols worked higher in rather active transfers.

American telephone dipped a sizable fraction, but a steady to firm tone prevailed in U. S. Steel, American commercial alcohol, Schenley, Consolidated Gas and Santa Fe.

SLEEP-GAS IS USED BY THIEF

Lancaster Burglar, However, Thwarted When Intended Victim Awakes.

Lancaster, April 7—A strange gas that produces sleep was detected in the home of Frank Stauffer early Friday, when Lancaster's bedroom thief was thwarted in an attempt to loot the place.

Awakened by a noise, Mr. Stauffer found the thief standing by his bedside searching the pockets of his trousers. The thief grabbed a shirt and covered his face to hide his identity as he fled.

A buckle had fallen from the belt of the trousers, and the noise aroused the thief's intended victim.

Mrs. Stauffer, a former nurse, told police that the strange gas filled every room in the house. She said it was not chloroform but that its effects were somewhat similar. The fumes are believed to have been used by the thief in an effort to overpower his intended victim.

The same thief is believed to have looted the home of Charles H. Snyder, 1218 East King street, and obtained $110 in cash.

TAX ON WENDEL ESTATE PUT AT ABOUT $128,000

New York, April 7 (AP).—Although Ella E. von E. Wendel, eccentric recluse, who died in 1931, left a gross estate of $36,306,255, the state will get only $128,000 in taxes. This was revealed Friday when a transfer tax appraisal was filed.

The net estate for taxation purposes was shown as only $2,432,355. The bulk of the estate passes in charitable bequests, which are tax exempt.

"BEST DRESSED WOMAN" IN EUROPE ON WAY HOME

New York, April 7 (AP).—Jean Nash du Bonnett sailed homeward on the liner Berengaria Friday, making a mystery of the whereabouts of her recently acquitted son, Andrew Donaldson Kirwan.

Mme. du Bonnet, often called "the best dressed woman in Europe," smilingly refused to say whether Kirwan was aboard the ship or whether he had been left behind to live with his maternal grandmother, Mrs. Emma Donaldson.

Air Crash Victim Tells of Fighting Way Through Colombian Jungle

Bolivar, Valle, Columbia, April 7 (AP)—How he stood guard over a fortune of gold for two weeks after his airplane was wrecked and then fought his way on foot out of the steaming jungles was the stirring story told by Newton C. Marshall, Milwaukee mining engineer, who was brought to this village Friday.

Weak from his thrilling experiences, Marshall was given medical attention and then related what happened after the crash of the Scadta airliner Von Krohn near the Uribe river March 10 while on a flight over the famed Choco mining district.

Two of the passengers of the plane were killed when the pilot, Capt. Walter Geck, brought the machine down in a forced landing after having been in the air four hours. The two were Julio Zuniga, a government employe, and Alexander Notz, a private aviation expert.

The mechanic, named Hancke, and the pilot were injured, but the mechanic was sent to obtain aid. He disappeared in the dense forest and never was seen again.

Marshall himself was hurt in the accident. He lost most of his teeth and had severe mouth lacerations. But he decided to stick to the plane and guard the large shipment of gold which the plane was carrying for the government mint at Medellin.

For two weeks Marshall remained at the wreck but eventually he figured that help was not coming and so he set out for civilization.

Being an old hand in fighting the jungles, from which few whites have ever emerged alive, Marshall managed to keep on the move and on March 27 he was found by a group of primitive Indians, noted for the use of poison darts propelled by blow guns.

The Indians, after giving him aid, agreed to guide him to the nearest town, and as they walked along a jungle trail the party came upon the body of Captain Geck, the pilot, who also had tried to reach the outside world with his life.

Officials indicated that Marshall will be taken to the town of Pereira in Caldas department for further treatment. He was still suffering from his four weeks in the back country, but was somewhat improved.

BARROW FLEES FROM OFFICERS

Kidnapped Chief of Police Is Released After Fourteen Hours.

Fort Scott, Kansas, April 7 (AP).—Clyde Barrow, phantom desperado of the southwest, fled before a growing army of police today after releasing a kidnapped police chief whose companion he had killed.

Scores of officers went into action along the Kansas-Missouri border after the desperado and his two companions released Percy Boyd, Commerce, Oklahoma, chief of police early today. They had held him prisoner for more than 14 hours.

They abducted him near Commerce, Friday, after Barrow shot and killed Cal Campbell, Miami, Oklahoma, constable. Boyd and Campbell had sought to investigate actions of two men and a woman whose motor car was mired.

Barrow shot the constable with a machine gun. The trio then forced Boyd into their car and sped away.

Boyd Treated Well

Boyd, who suffered a scalp wound said he was positive as to the identification of Barrow and Bonnie Parker, the desperado's cigar-smoking companion. He expressed the belief the other member of the trio, a tall, sandy-haired man, was Raymond Hamilton, alleged associate of Barrow.

He said they had three machine guns, three shot guns, several pistols and a suitcase full of ammunition. They treated him well, helped him bandage his wound, and gave him a clean shirt to replace one which was covered with blood.

Driving fast, the killer rode into Kansas soon after the Commerce shooting.

Throughout the night Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma officers were busy tracing reports that the trio had been seen. National guard cavalrymen patroled the Kansas-Oklahoma border.

POPE, HITLER ARE AT ODDS

Negotiations Underway to Insure Peace; Goring Attacks Catholics.

Berlin, April 7 (AP)—A pastoral letter issued by the bishop of Osnabrueck Friday disclosed for the first time that negotiations have become necessary between the vatican and the German government to insure peace between Catholics and nazis.

He asked Catholics to await the outcome of the dealings and pray for their success. The presence of Vice-Chancellor Franz von Papen, in Rome ostensibly for informal conversations with Premier Mussolini and Pope Pius, assumed new significance because of the letter.

"No good German would be oppressed or discriminated against just because he belongs to Catholic societies, the protection of which is solemnly assured by a concordat," the bishop declared.

Conflict Becomes Bitter

Meanwhile the differences between nazis and the Catholic church increased in bitterness, with challenges and counter-challenges hurled.

Reichsminister Herman Wilhelm, Goring's newspaper, the Essener National Zeitung, in a vehement attack on leading Catholic newspapers and several Catholic bishops, asked significantly, "Is a test of strength wanted?" The Duisburg district court this week refused to grant an injunction against the National Zeitung at the request of Catholic complainants, who charged unfair competitive practices and held that the so-called Catholic press is superfluous.

LAWYER GETS FIVE YEARS

Lancaster, April 7—John N. Hetrick, 66, disbarred lawyer, sought by police for three months, walked into the Lancaster county court Friday morning and pleaded guilty on charges of embezzlement and fradulent conversion involving $9,450. He was sentenced to serve five years in the Lancaster county prison and pay a fine of $1000 and costs.

Police had located Hetrick's hiding place near Philadelphia. Plans had been made for a surprise raid on the hideout when the former attorney surrendered.

The money involved in the charges was intrusted to Hetrick by clients.

Meanwhile, relatives are trying to locate the missing man. The victim of the alleged kidnapping was making his home with the family of Peter Bourassa. The alleged kidnapping took place on March 25, the old man being alone in the house at the time.

"Marrying Parson" Returns To Elkton, Scoring Big Coup

Elkton, Md., April 7 (AP)—Forced out of the marrying business last year in a war with the taxi companies, the Rev. Edward Minor, known as a "marrying parson," is back again in a new and really strategic position.

He has purchased a house just inside the boundaries of Elkton and a block nearer Wilmington than the two houses owned by his competitor, the taxi company.

The importance of the location is at once evident to any person even slightly acquainted with Elkton's marriage industry. Lovelorn couples from Wilmington, Philadelphia, New York and other cities in the East, seeking to hasten the tying of the wedding knot, dash post-haste to Maryland, where the laws impose no delay.

In coming from these eastern points Elkton is the first place they hit in Maryland, and the Rev. Mr. Minor's home will be the first of the various available homes occupied by ministers where the ceremony can be performed.

Mr. Minor's war with the taxi companies last year resulted in his ejection from the house he occupied when the taxi companies purchased it. To tie up the situation more completely, the companies purchased the home on the opposite corner.

But the 74-year-old clergyman was far from beaten. After a brief sojourn in Baltimore he returned to Elkton and bided his time until the house he has just purchased was available.

When Mr. Minor first came to Elkton he was frankly in the employ of the taxi companies, who found the transportation of couples about to be married very profitable. They split later on a matter of dividing fees.

JUDITH LANE

By Jeanne Bowman

SYNOPSIS: Judith Dale is at the Rio Diablo dam to supervise its construction according to the plans provided by Tom Bevins, and with the money Bevins left Judith for the purpose. Judith's husband Norman, however, has sided against her, and joined his law partner, Morton Lampere, in contesting the will in the interest of Mrs. Bevins and her daughter Mathile, a friend of Norman's. Judith learns that Lampere has treacherously had the court hearing advanced.

Chapter 30

GOOD NEWS

The little town of Big Tom. She liked it; liked the raw pink of fresh cut lumber used in the buildings on the town's main street, the hot dog stands with their inevitable aroma of frying onions, the chili parlors, barber shop, Ike Ephriam's Emporium, the little proprietor with kind dark eyes who wrapped a morsel of philosophy into each package.

If she lost control of the Bevins fortune, it would mean these keen-eyed young construction men would go out to look for other work with the unsatisfied feeling of leaving uncompleted work, and for the mass of dam workers there would begin another forlorn hegira to "another job if we can find one."

She should have been more alert . . . should have. She looked towards the sky with wordless prayer. Two stars seemed to separate from the mass in the heavens, move forward, grow larger. The night lights of an air ship. She heard the muted roar of three motors, saw the dip of the plane, towards the leveled field Slim Sanford used for landing.

From the small front porch of her shack Judith watched the figures of two men approach. She knew that one would be Slim Sanford. The other . . . her heart beat like a trip hammer with hope that he might be Norman, and then the hope died as the two men swung into a lighted area. The other was Justin Cunard.

She ran downhill to meet them, her voice caroling before her, "What news?"

"Good news," they answered in unison.

"The will contest has been continued to late September."

"But I thought. . . . I heard that it started today?"

"No," Cunard had caught her elbow and the three had started back up hill, the older man propelling her gently forward. "No, thanks to your friend Clia, it didn't start today.

"As soon as she found out that Lampere and Maritellan had slipped the case in earlier than it was supposed to be on the court calendar, she called them to her office.

"She told them what she had heard in the file room of the county court house and said she would make it public if they tried to push the case forward without giving you a chance to get up here and Judge Morgan a chance to appear. He was out of town on another case and one of his partners would have had to handle it.

"Maritellan said the docket was full and it would have to be continued to fall. I suppose Lampere thought you couldn't hold out financially that long. Maybe you can't, but now that I'm first vice-president of the company I have the right to put my personal fortune into it. I talked it over with Mrs. Cunard and she's with me a hundred per cent, so we'll see you through.

"And so this morning, when the case was called, Lampere sent Morrison to represent him. Judge Morgan's son appeared for him, and Maritellan, a little bit yellow about the gills, set it over. I feel sorry for Maritellan, he's a fine white fellow. I'd like to know what hold Lampere has on him."

They reached the little house and Cunard gave it a quick approving glance. Delphy met them at the door, with a quick inquiry as to their dinner hour. Satisfied they were as hungry as she had hoped they would be she went into the kitchen and the others sat on the porch to talk.

"This will probably mean war down here, Miss Judith," Cunard admitted, when they had discussed Lampere and Maritellan. "Morton is clever enough to know that by fall the dam will be far enough ahead for Judge Morgan to use it as proof that you are following Big Tom's directions in using his money."

"Why didn't he get a court order restraining her from going on with the dam?" inquired Slim.

"He tried," explained Judith, "tried when he succeeded in getting the injunction against my use of the money, but there has been too much unemployment the past few years for any human to refuse work to three hundred men, as long as I was willing to pay them.

"Lampere would have had to go before the State Commission and prove the dam impractical from an engineering viewpoint, to have succeeded in that and he knew he couldn't do that."

They were silent a moment and Judith longed to ask for news of Norman, but was ashamed to admit she knew nothing.

"How do you suppose Lampere will wage his war?" Sanford asked, breaking in on her thoughts.

"I wish I knew," answered Cunard, "it will be something inspired by diabolical cleverness."

Cunard discussed the city end of the dam building, while the two men did justice to Delphy's beaten cheese biscuits, potted chicken and coffee. He expressed a desire to make a tour of dam property and said he would be there for several days.

Sanford said little. He watched Judith anxiously, remarked she looked tired, and pretended to scold Delphy for starving her mistress, then, as they arose from the table and started to leave, he turned to Judith.

"I have a package here from Clia. Doggone, must have left it in the ship, but there's a letter your husband asked me to bring down."

"You saw him?" she asked, hoping her voice didn't reveal her eagerness.

"No, but Clia did. He dashed into the courtroom this morning, said he'd just heard of the trial starting and told young Morrison quite frankly, that he didn't like the way their firm was doing business. Clia sidled up to him and wangled a luncheon invitation out of him. You know Clia. He asked about you and I imagine she told him plenty. She would. She told him I was flying down tonight and he asked her to wait while he wrote a note to send down with me."

"How did he look, did she say?"

"No, she didn't. Well, goodnight, Judy, you need some rest. We'll see you in the morning, adios—"

As soon as the two men had left, Judith turned to the letter. Would he be asking for a divorce?

"Dear Judith, a hasty note, as Clia's waiting. I find it difficult to say what I want to say, perhaps because my mind is not yet clear. A year ago I would have sworn that a woman did not love a man, if she could leave him to work against his interests, simply because she believed in what she was doing.

"However, I find I am doing the same thing. I find my love for you is unchanged, yet under the circumstances I cannot ask you to return to me.

"I believe that had we been married longer and our lives welded together with sympathetic interests, this separation could not have happened.

"It has. I shall leave you free to do what you wish, and I'll try to be as fair as you have been in not blaming me for my stand. I love you, Judith.

"NORMAN."

Judith reread the note, trying to sense the meaning between lines; trying to read into each line more than the actual words revealed. Did he mean that in leaving her "free" he wished their separation to become permanent?

She felt a moment's pique at his sportsmanship. Wtih feminine inconsistency she wished he would rush to her and demand she return to him. She wondered what Slim Sanford would have done under similar circumtsances.

She reread the last line, "I love you, Judith." There was sincerity there. She would keep faith with that line, and maybe time and destiny would do the rest.

She slept better that night than she had slept for some time, perhaps because having heard from Norman, she entertained neither false hopes nor fears. She remembered Big Tom's plea that she be patient with Norman, and promised herself that she would be patient, a promise she was to laugh at with bitterness.

Breakfast, Cunard and Sanford arrived simultaneously. Judith enjoyed the festive air which seemed to permeate the little dwelling with their coming.

Later a stable boy brought up three horses and the trio started on their tour of inspection. Judith felt pardonable pride in the friendly loyalty of the men whom they met at every step of their journey. When Cunard expressed a desire to meet Scoggins, after learning who held the salient point of land jutting into the main flood basin of the dam, they rode down to the Scoggins farm and were invited to stay for dinner.

Back to Big Tom Town and Judith's shack and Cunard announced that on the next day he would like to make an air tour of the Rio Diablo country.

To Judith, who had covered nearly every step the year previous, the air trip was fascinating.

DANCER WEDS SANS STOCKINGS

Breathless and excited, Bobbe Arnst, the dancer, arrived 25 minutes late for her marriage to Robert Cavenaugh, Chicago attorney, at Larchmont, N. Y. She said a shopping trip delayed her. Miss Arnst, former wife of Johnny Weissmuller, screen and aquatic star, wore a brown straw hat, mink coat, white crepe dress, but no stockings. The couple is shown as Justice Wesley Messersmith performed the ceremony. (Associated Press Photo)

Arendtsville at New Oxford, postponed.

Fairfield and Littlestown, the latter defending champions, got off to good starts in the Adams county scholastic baseball league Friday afternoon by turning back East Berlin and Biglerville, respectively, by scores of 5-4, and 5-3. By mutual agreement the New Oxford-Arendtsville game was postponed until Monday.

Fairfield won its game in the sixth frame by pushing over a run to break a 4-4 tie. A base on balls to M. Musselman, his steal of second, and C. Kittinger's bingle produced the wining run.

Deardorff, Biglerville pitcher, outhurled Ecker, of Littlestown, but lost the decision when the defense weakened in the seventh inning. Deardorff fanned fourteen batsmen and allowed but three safeties. Ecker fanned ten. Last year's champs pushed over the winning runs in the last frame when with two out, Deardorff grew wild and hit two batsmen. Ecker followed with a single and both runners scored when the ball got away from the outfielders.

Baseball Game Is Postponed

Rain and wet grounds forced the cancellation of the baseball game scheduled to be played between Gettysburg college and Dartmouth university on Nixon field this afternoon.

Continued rains throughout Friday night and a light drizzle this morning removed all possibility of playing the contest.

The Bullets will meet Dickinson here next Saturday afternoon.

Drink Milk
From Life Guard Fed Cows

You will be interested in knowing that the average analysis of samples of Life Guard Milk, taken from Dairies in five different states, shows an Iodine content of 109 gamma per cent.

Prof. Erf's statement to us was that 50 gammas was the lower limit to thoroughly nourish the thyroid of a child and prevent the formation of Goitre cells.

According to a health report made in Gettysburg there were 69 quarantine cases from January 1, 1934, to March 31. Out of this number seven cases were on our milk routes, and one case out of these seven cases was using two kinds of milk. We have had one case quarantined on our rural section.

In the health report of Gettysburg for the past six months, we have had 128 quarantines, of this number 17 on our route, eight of this number using two kinds of milk.

Now over 350 homes are using this new scientific Life Guard Milk in Gettysburg and vicinity.

Life Guard Milk is delicious, refreshing, appetizing —it tastes like more. But, most important, it is especially healthful because it contains vitamin, iodine, iron and other minerals that make pure blood, build bone and flesh in the children, guard against disease, and tone up the systems of the grown folks.

Majestic Club in Celebration: Twelve years ago on Tuesday twelve young men of Gettysburg banded themselves together with the idea of forming a social organization and establishing club rooms, where they could meet and indulge in general good times.

Such was the origin of the Majestic club, still in rooms in the old Star and Sentinel building on Baltimore street, but a larger and more prosperous social club has emerged.

On Monday evening the annual celebration of fathers and sons night took place in honor of the occasion.

Norton C. Miller, president of the club since 1917, loved and respected by all of the members, and "daddy" to the organization, acted in the capacity of toastmaster.

Eleven men responded to calls for speeches: William F. Codori, Sr., John McDonnell and George Stallsmith, father of members who helped with the club's founding in 1912. Other speakers were Dr. Frank Kramer, Samuel Reed, E. H. Markley, Jack Crowe, Charles W. Gardner, B. Frank Reaser, I. L. Taylor and Sheriff John Shealer.

Besides Mr. Miller the club has another officer, Earl Stallsmith, in who are combined the duties of secretary and treasurer.

Read the Bible With Us Daily

For I have received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you, That the Lord Jesus, the same night in which he was betrayed, took bread:

And when he had given thanks, he brake it, and said, Take, eat; this is my body, which is broken for you: this do in remembrance of me.

After the same manner also he took the cup, when he had supper, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood: this do yet, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me.

For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come.

Wherefore whosoever shall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord, unworthily, shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord.

But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup.

For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body.

For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep.

For if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged.

But when we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world.

Wherefore my brethren, when ye come to eat, tarry one for another.

And if any man hunger, let him eat at home; that ye come not together unto condemnation. And the rest will I set in order when I come.

1 Corinthians 11:23-34.

THE HOPELESS FUTURE

The books are filled with chronicles of men
Who shook their old gray heads and spoke their fears.
They sensed that change was coming with the years
And all the world would lie in ruin then.
"No hope!" said Johnson. Voltaire added sneers.
"Nowhere a love for what is good appears Soon sinks the race never to rise again."

Should either of those scholars wise return
They would not know their way about the earth.
Countless the marvels they would have to learn
That were not even dreamed of at their birth.
"No Hope!" cried Johnson clinging to the old.
Still, every day new mysteries unfold!

—By George Matthew Adams—

HOSPITABLE PEOPLE

NOTHING makes us feel better than to be with those who make us seem at home, and happy in their presence. There are homes into which we can step at any time and feel that we are welcome—and what a pleasure it is to have such people come into one's own home!

I have always found Southern people so very hospitable, though there can really be no boundary to the territory where generosity thrives. It is scattered everywhere. But it is found in such a marked degree where the superficial in life has not been allowed to enter. In farming communities, and in rural surroundings, life glows so much, and the realities take hold upon the heart. Here there will always be found an open-mindedness and a spirit of hospitality that are unequalled.

How close we feel to people who take us exactly as we are, and expect at no time any apology for what we lack. I have taken a cup of tea in homes where I have been happier than if a banquet had been prepared. Amongst one's friends the mind and heart alone need nourishment.

We must have our friends—the little handful—who contribute so much to the joy and comfort of our lives, and who enrich the soil in which all our greatest aspirations take root.

It is such a refreshing experience to have friends that make you feel, also, that you can be exactly what you are in their presence, or in their home, with no fear of being misunderstood. What a pleasure to return to a home, or friend, and know that you can begin again where you left off!

Genuineness needs so display whatsoever. And that's what true hospitality always evidences. Also, it doesnt make you feel that you have contracted a debt that you must somehow pay at some future date. Hospitality is its own reward.

It is possible to scent the spirit of a hotel or home the moment that you enter one. That is because there is always a dominant personality —or many—that keeps hospitality in the air and gives one something vital to breathe the moment of entrance.

MARIAN MARTIN FROCK IN SIZES 36 TO 46

Nothing works quite the magic on the larger figure like a deep cape and slender panelled seampoints found in today's charming ings — and these are the fashion model. The cape is large, scalloped and gracefully flared, and follows the surprise line of the bodice closing. A snug hip loke and the aforementioned panels keep the figure straight below the waistline. For afternoons in warm weather, georgettes and chiffons are lovely —in colorful prints or monotones. For very dressy occasions, lace would be ideal, and for mornings use dimity, swiss or voile.

BRADLEY ADMITS HE'D 'GAMBLE ON ANYTHING'

Critics Laud New Book On Battle of Gettysburg

MacKinlay Kantor's new novel "Long Remember" of the Civil war is attracting favorable comments from book reviewers throughout the east.

Hal Borland has the following to say about the new book in his Public Ledger column:

"MacKinlay Kantor has written the Civil war novel just as certainly as Stephen Vincent Benet wrote the Civil war poem. The fact that Kantor has narrowed his canvas down to the battle of Gettysburg does not lessen his achievement in capturing the war's whole movement. Gettysburg was the focal point of military action that was not only the war's turning point, but the epitome of the war itself, and the effect of the invasion and the battle in that area must have been largely typical of the effect of invasion and battle every where in the zone of action. Kantor has captured that effect, and in so doing he has caught the war itself and translated it into words and emotions.

"His story is personal; that is, it is the story of individuals rather than of groups or of armies. By this method he brings his action down to simple terms. Mass movements are almost entirely missing from his narratives. Yet the cumulative effect is in itself massive, like a thunderstorm whose approaching clouds fill the sky and whose downpour drenches and transforms everything in its path.

* * *

"The story about which Kantor has woven his war story is extremely simple. Daniel Bale, Gettysburg native, went west at the age of 19, expecting to stay in the frontier country a year or two and write a book on philosophy. Nine years later he returned to Gettysburg, called back by the approaching death of his grandfather, his last relative. The year was 1863; the season late spring.

"Bale had fought his share of Indians in the west. He knew he was no coward. But he had no taste for this Civil war, where brother faced brother and slaughter went on for reasons that to Bale did not make sense. He would have no part in it.

"He was looked on, therefore, as a copperhead. This annoyed him, stirred him to fighting anger, but did not shade his resolution. Then he met Irene, wife of Ty Fanning, boyhood friend, who was now a captain in the Union army. Irene, beautiful and emotional, had not found love in her match with Ty. She did find love with Bale, whose house stood next door to that of her husband's parents on the Chambers road near the seminary.

* * *

"Gossips sent word to young Fanning of what was going on at home. He wrote bitterly to Irene of what he had learned. Then the confederates advanced to Gettysburg, and soon afterwards the Union army came pouring into town. The battle lines were drawn, the battle fought. Bale, as a helper to old Dr. Duffey, attended the wounded in the first day's fighting.

"Then the reenforcements began to arrive, and Irene, certain that Ty Fanning was with them and would be killed, insisted that Bale go to him and tell him the lies that would allow him to die happy. Bale went.

"But he was caught in the heaviest action. He was mistaken for a soldier. Officers tried to force him into the fighting. He saw Fanning. To reach him Bale had to battle his way through a group of soldiers. In the confusion he killed a Union officer. He told Fanning the lies, helped him to the Fanning home, saw that he would lose a leg but would survive. And when the battle was ended Bale locked the door of his own house, shouldered his bag and headed toward Washington and the army. The battle of Gettysburg had shattered his philosophical world.

"But that is only the framework on which the whole substance of the novel is hung. It is the tangible action within which the psychological action moves, with the terrific impact of events on emotions, ideals and ordinary human relationships. Even the battle itself is only the background for what happens inside the characters.

"Yet it is undoubtedly those stark details of war for which the novel will be chiefly remembered. The publishers point to its sharp realism, and quite properly. It has that realism which states hard facts bluntly and does not dodge the dirt and the suffering and the horror of war to substitute for them the false glamour of doubtful heroics. But I would point rather to the novel's poetry. Brutal poetry it is, in many cases, but the novel as a whole is poetic rather than narrative in conception. War, as Kantor sets it down, is horrible business for all involved; but in the human emotions stirred up he finds the heroic kind of poetry one feels in the old Greek tragedies.

"The background of the book—the atmospheric background—offers illustration. The book opens with a countryside on which beauty and peace rest rather uneasily. Then suddenly the confederates are approaching; sharp tension as they roll into town and quarter themselves. Relief mingled with suspense comes with their departure and the arrival of the union columns, and this itself soon explodes into the horror of battle, with its crescendo of musketry and cannonading, its shrill overtone of the rebel yell and the bellowing roar of lose combat, a roar which echoed for days in the minds of those who felt the painful quiet come back to rest sadly on the shell-plowed hills and reddened valleys.

"Much more might be said about 'Long Remember'—its fidelity to fact, its use of real characters, its development of minor action. But those are things to be discovered in the book."

FRUIT STAIN YOUR DRESS? HERE'S FIRST AID TRICK

If fruit stains your dress or table cloth cover the stain at once with powdered starch and let it remain for at least an hour. Upon rubbing off the starch every trace of the stain will probably be gone. If the stain has dried, rub each side of the material with yellow soap, spread over this a paste made of starch and cold water and rub it well. Then expose it to the sun and air until the stain disappears. Another trick is to dip the stain into sour buttermilk if you happen to have any around.

Fill Oven To Capacity To Save Baking Time

Time and money can be saved by filling the oven to capacity at baking time. A roast, for example, may be baking simultaneously with a loaf cake, nut bread, fruit pudding or escalloped mixtures.

Foods baked during the cooking of the evening meal often may be served the following day. During spring months it is wise to have only two or three baking days a week.

EATING FOR HEALTH

Do you need vitamins? Then eat eggs, leafy vegetables, raw fruits, and drink plenty of milk.

Do you want proteins? They're in milk, too, and in meat, vegetables, fish, nuts, cheese.

Do you want fats? They're in butter, cream, oils, bacon.

And, of course, if you need starchy foods—or if you shouldn't have them —you'll be able to accept or reject macaroni, potatoes, rice, syrups.

Urges Probe of Telephone Firms

Washington, April 7 (AP).—Stern and efficient control of the nation's message and word-sending systems by a new commission whose first duty would be a thorough study of the American Telephone and Telegraph company and other big firms and their subsidiaries was recommended Friday by Walter M. W. Splawn.

Mr. Splawn, recently appointed to the interestate commerce commission, made the recommendations to the house commerce committee for which he has just completed a three-year study of holding companies. He urged enactment of the pending communications regulating bill.

His report, after citing "prolific abuses" by holding companies, liberal salaries paid officers of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, and saying it was impossible to determine the fairness of rates, said:

"It is my belieff that the first step to be taken in the direction of the effective regulation of communications companies is a thorough and detailed study of the big companies and their subsidiaries. Such an inquiry will require no less than a year. It should not be undertaken with an appropriation of less than $500,000, and perhaps it should be as much as $1,000,000.

FRANCE HONORS FORMER ASSISTANT TO EDISON

Detroit, April 7 (AP)—France has conferred on Francis Jehl, former assistant to Thomas A. Edison, the title of Chevalier of the Legion of Honor.

Jehl, now curator of the Edison museum in Henry Ford's Greenfield village, was guest of honor at a banquet Thursday night. M. Morand, French counsul here, recalled that Jehl, after assisting Edison in the perfection of the incadescent lamp, went to Paris and organized the forerunning of all lighting plants in Europe.

"I feel that I am basking in the reflecting glories of my masters," Jehl said.

Railroads to Guide French Aviators

Paris (AP)—Railroads, used as guides by lost aviators, are to be marked throughout France in an attempt to diminish accidents.

Recent fatal crashes have resulted from amateur pilots following rail lines and smashing into hillsides as tracks dove into invisible tunnels. Others have resulted from pilots trying to read names on the sides of stations.

Moved by these accidents, the government has decided to spend $3,500,000 as part of a public works program to put along tracks the names of railway stations and other indications about tunnels and distances in huge letters.

The letters to be used will be 7x2 feet, of enamel and screwed to wooden platforms. It will be possible to read them from as high as 3,900 feet.

They will be placed between tracks and kept clean by track walkers.

Save Two Million By Centralization

Columbus, O. (AP)—A saving of $2,000,000 in two years is claimed by Joseph W. Fichter, assistant director of education, in the closing of 300 "expensive and unnecessary" schools in state aid districts.

Closing of the schools, of which there are about 4,000 in some 830 districts in the state, was done, says Fichter, without sacrificing service.

Transportation facilities were revised, routes consolidated and the pupils of closed schools "centralized."

MARANVILLE GETS THE 'BREAKS'

It was a "bad break" when Walter "Rabbit" Maranville, veteran Boston Braves second baseman, fractured a leg during an exhibition game at St. Petersburg, Fla., and a "good break" when Nurses Edith Green (left) and Myrtle Bloomquist came to cheer him up in the hospital after the accident. Destiny of Roosevelt Policy Cause for Much Speculation

By BYRON PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

The long-term purpose of the Roosevelt program is becoming more and more a subject of debate in Washington. Where is it all leading? What is the central idea behind it? Toward what final order of things is Mr. Roosevelt working?

Six months ago nobody seemed to be thinking much about such things. The emphasis was on the emergency character of the administration policies. Now there is more talk, more speculation, more questioning about the ultimate goal.

* * *

The wide-spread uncertainty about this is well illustrated by the variety of conclusions reached in recently-published reviews of the first year of Mr. Roosevelt's presidency.

* * *

Economists, publicists and officials, most of them well-informed, were able to draw all sorts of inferences as to the direction we are traveling.

Some said we were headed for socialism. Some said communism, some fascism. The president, himself, recently said the underlying theme was to reestablish democracy, but he supplied none of the details.

One Washington correspondent was asked by his managing editor to draw a pen picture of what life will be like five or ten years hence if the Roosevelt plan is carried to completion. He replied that no one was wise enough to answer that question.

* * *

Works Like Quarterback

It may be that the president has it all thought out and is working toward the specifications of a definite plan, but most of his own utterances do not indicate it.

He has likened himself to a football quarterback, unable to decide what the next play will be until he has seen the results of the last.

He sent his farm relief proposal to congress accompanied by a frank statement that it was an experiment, and would be abandoned if it didn't work.

His critics have pointed out numerous instances where they felt administration policy was traveling one way with respect to one situation, the opposite way with respect to another.

The Tennessee valley project is an ambitious venture in public ownership; administration support for a ship subsidy tends toward development of private industry.

The NRA is criticized on one hand as establishing autocratic control over business; and on the other as encouraging unlimited private monopoly by its suspension of the anti-trust laws.

Almost anyone you ask will point out what he thinks is a central thread of consistency running through administration policy, but no two seem to agree what sort of central thread it is, or where the end of it is to be found.

The Master Plan

An official who probably is as close to the president as anyone, who has seen him dealing on a large scale with the most difficult and complicated economic problems, was asked what the master plan of it all was.

He replied that as nearly as he could envision it, the ultimate purpose was to accomplish some sort of redistribution of wealth.

But there are many degrees of redistribution. Some who speak of that mean merely less favoritism for the wealthy, more opportunity for the little fellow. Others mean by the term a forcible dividing up of property.

Every indication is that the current speculation will continue for a long time to come. How far the president is prepared to go, and by what exact route, he is not yet ready to say. So everybody is entitled to his own guess.

Tests Show Many Are Superstitious

Hutchinson, Kas. (AP)—The survival of superstition was shown in a survey conducted by Hutchinson junior college students under Prof. R. C. Woodard.

A total of 187 superstitious beliefs was encountered, with nine out of 10 persons holding that one or more of the following is unlucky: Friday the 13th; 13 at a table; spilling salt; a black cat crossing one's path, and walking under a ladder. Others believed the groundhog weather forecasting legend; that breaking a mirror brings seven years' bad luck, and that the third attempt is likely to succeed.

Family Thrives On $6 Per Week

Danville, Va. (AP)—Nutrition experts at the University of Minnesota who recently figured a family of five could live on $5 a week can take a few lessons from Mrs. Lena Carden.

Feeding her family of seven on $6 a week, she is gaining so much weight that doctors have ordered her to diet.

Mrs. Carden works in a cotton mill and is the sole support of her family.

LINK GERMANY IN WAR BLAST

New Affidavit From Exiled Labor Leader Involves Hitler Official.

New York, April 7.—An affidavit obtained in Ireland from James Larkin, labor leader, who was deported in 1922, may play an important part in deciding whether Germany should pay for the famous Black Tom blast that helped push the United States into the world war.

The blast destroyed 300 carloads of ammunition in a railroad terminal at Jersey City, New Jersey, on July 29, 1916, besides killing four persons and injuring hundreds.

Names Man High in Nazi Regime

Larkin's affidavit, as revealed Friday in the World-Telegram, names a man now high in the Hitler regime in Germany as one of the agents "with knowledge" of the Black Tom explosion.

He tells of hearing in a restaurant in New York's German colony a group of German agents laying plans for exploding a loaded barge alongside the Jersey City munitions terminal.

A Germa nagent told Larkin, the paper says, of having "direct orders from Berlin" to stop the shipment of heavy gun ammunition and TNT, and thus give Germany an advantage on the western front.

German agents took him to the Hoboken waterfront, Larkin is quoted as saying, and showed him a liquid explosive which they called "feuerwasser," and which could be carried in little bottles like scent.

Larkin asserted that the Germans offered him $200 a week if he would take part in sabotage operations here. Though he was living the hand-to-mouth life of a radical in war time, Larkin "told Boy-Ed that I would have nothing to do with such matters," he said.

During the war a Capt. Karl Boy-Ed, German naval attache at Washington, was suspected of espionage and expelled from the country. He is now dead.

The World-Telegram said Larkin named a score or more of well-known Germans, some now in high position in Germany, as directing sabotage operations here. He said that though the Irish revolutionists had "an understanding" with the Ferman agent they took no part in sabotage in the United States.

For seventeen years, investigators for several nations have been trying to fix responsibility for the explosion. Larkin was among those accused.

Larkin was deported after Gov. Alfred E. Smith pardoned him when he had served two years in Sing Sing prison for criminal anarchy in the war years and later, he was active first in socialist, then in communist circles.

The Irish labor leader's affidavit was obtained, the World-Telegram says, by Casimir P. Palmer, a former agent of the British intelligence service in the United States.

So far 29,000 of the applications have been found defective and returned for correction.
